

PUBLIC TALK

Global Epistemic Justice, Post-Development and Knowledge Production in the Social Sciences

Thursday, 17.11.2022, 2-4 pm

by Prof. Dr. Sumi Madhok

LSE, Mercator Fellow in the DFG-project

"Theorizing Post-Development"

This talk will focus on the question of global epistemic justice. Global epistemic justice means to take seriously epistemic interventions from 'most of the world' in a way that matters epistemically. Some elements of global epistemic justice will be outlined and illustrated by Prof. Dr. Sumi Madhok drawing on her long-standing ethnographies of subaltern struggles over rights and "development". These subaltern struggles for/and over development are important epistemic sites for knowledge production on development and post development. And, in particular, for envisioning radical political imaginaries of citizenship, justice and rights.
